Bathtub Beach beckons again

XAVIER MASCAREÑAS/TREASURE COAST NEWSPAPERS

Wilma Soular, visiting from Indiana, and her grandsons, Lue McLamore, left, 3, and Miguel McLamore, almost 2, brace for a wave while playing in shallow waters at Bathtub Beach in Stuart on Monday. It was the beach's first day open after a beach renourishment project was completed. "I've been coming here for about 20 years. This is my favorite beach," Soular said. Her daughter, Nancy McLamore of Stuart, said they were all excited to find the beach reopened. Work done during the project, which used federal funds to repair damage to the area following Hurricane Matthew, included adding sand to the beach to improve storm protection for the park and MacArthur Boulevard.
